

Utamaro Flowering Quince

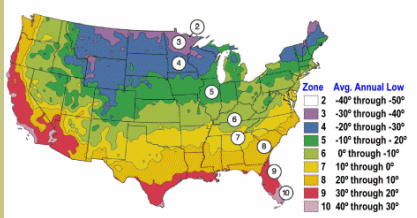

Chaenomeles japonica 'Utamaro'

A dwarf growing bush with orange-red flowers prized for use in bonsai applications as well as for cut flowers, container gardening and small borders.

A dwarf spreading plant with many short branches, ten year growth will be approximately 12"-18" tall with an ultimate height of perhaps 24"-30" tall.

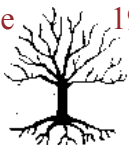

Supposedly named after Utamaro who was a famous Japanese woodblock print maker in the late 1700's.

Cold hardy to U.S.D.A. Zone 4B.
